Longitudinal course in Singapore. The long-term course of childhood asthma in the Singaporean population was investigated. Asthma history was taken from all children registered for the first time in an urban primary care clinic in the first quarter of 1989. The children were followed up 4 years later, and the asthma status was reassessed. The cumulative incidence of current and total asthma showed a decreasing trend ($p = 0.01$ and Partial tibial resection: comparison of results after 4 years. Seventy-five consecutive partial tibial resections were performed in 67 patients from 1979 to 1987. There was a 47 percent rate of limb amputation (range, 0 to 62 percent) for failed patients, a 17 percent rate of reoperation (1 to 32 percent) and a 13 percent rate of infection (range, 2 to 20 percent). In the patients with diabetes mellitus, the rate of amputation was 79 percent. The rates of failure and infection were identical for patients who were receiving daily heparin prophylaxis and for patients who were not receiving heparin. In contrast, a statistically significant difference was noted for amputation rate in the three groups of patients who were receiving postoperative antibiotics for 3 to 7 days, no postoperative antibiotics, and a combination of postoperative antibiotics and daily heparin.Possible stock market crash looms By Michael Collins 16 June 2008 Many stock market experts are concluding that a stock market crash is imminent, with no let-up in sight. The market's average daily trading volume is a testament to the rate at which the stock market is being manipulated and pumped up
