Thousands of truck drivers went on strike across Spain as part of a nationwide protest against reforms introduced by the government this summer, according to reports. The strikers are protesting at attempts to reform the controversial IRTL union contract, after the government passed new law reforms on August 3rd. The law aims to replace the 2006 terms and conditions of the IRTL, which were derided for their high pay and minimal work hours. Since the reforms, thousands have staged sit-ins and protests, including at the Port of Barcelona, where as many as 70 drivers stayed on strike until Sunday, according to Reuters. One employee said that the protest was being driven by workers themselves and aimed to "push the government to raise the minimum wage." The strike has so far led to higher fuel prices in Spain's northeast due to the shortage of essential fuel, according to the BBC. Read more The Emergency Election Sale is now live! Get 30% to 60% off our most popular products today! Thanks to for letting me know about this thread. I have a related question. I recently discovered that there was a table called "message details" where the "MESSAGE TYPE" value is stored as a HEX representation. This is for a switch that records a customer calling party number and stores that value as a hex value in the table. My question is, what do you store the number as for the "MESSAGE TYPE" field in the "message messages" table for text messages? Like: 'message details' or is it'message messages text'? Obviously, if it's a message type you wish to group your messages by, you would include that in the message details table. The Hex representation of the text message fields will be fine, since you
